Office Hours: by appointment only

Course Description:

This course the collection, organization, analysis, and interpretation of data in the context of applications from such fields as business, education, political science, economics, psychology, sociology, nutrition, and medicine. The importance of experimental design and sampling techniques are studied and stressed throughout the course. Elementary probability theory is introduced as well as the following theoretical distributions: binomial, normal, and Student’s T. An algebra background is required as well as a scientific or statistical calculator (I like the TI-XS a good value at $15.99).

Course Outcomes:

Students will demonstrate critical reasoning and problem solving skills within the following contexts:

- Discussing statistics as a necessary way of understanding a world that is increasingly number and information oriented.
- Examining how statistics can be distorted and misused.
- Emphasizing ways information can be simplified and described.
- Stressing the importance of experimental design and sampling techniques particularly as they apply to a student’s chosen discipline and research interests.
- Exploring useful methods of making predictions based upon available information considering elementary probability theory and the following important theoretical distributions: binomial, normal, Student’s T, and chi-square.
- Demonstrating technological competence in the use of statistical software and the ability to evaluate and explain the generated output.

Assessment:
There will be 3 exams each worth 30% of your grade. Homework will be worth 10% of your grade and will be checked each class.
The grading scale is as follows:

Attendance in class is expected of all students and mandatory on exam days, but it will not be factored numerically into your grade. Make-up exams will be given only with prior notification and documentation of a legitimate excuse. All assignments are due in-class on the due date and will not be accepted otherwise without prior notification and documentation of a legitimate excuse.

Notes:
- I fully support the Cedar Crest College Honor Code and the Classroom Protocol code as stated in the Customs Book. Appropriate classroom behavior is implicit in the Cedar Crest College Honor Code. Such behavior is defined and guided by complete protection for the rights of all students and faculty to a courteous, respectful classroom environment. That environment is free from distractions such as late arrivals, early departures, inappropriate conversations and other behaviors that might disrupt instruction and/or compromise students’ access to their Cedar Crest College education.
- Cell phones should be turned off for the duration of the class period. Please do NOT TEXT MESSAGE IN CLASS.
- Collaboration on daily homework is expected and encouraged, but any work turned in for a final grade should be your own. Violations of the college plagiarism policy will be reported to the dean and result in a grade of zero for the particular assignment/exam.
• It is vitally important for you to keep current with the work. Students who fall behind early quickly find themselves in a hole that is very difficult, if not impossible, to get out of. I’m more than willing to meet with you during office hours to help you succeed. You must make the effort and make an appointment.
• The format of the course will be lecture/discussion with much emphasis on in class work/homework discussion.
• It will be beneficial for you to have read the day’s material prior to class. You may not totally understand it at first but then you will be seeing it a second time during lecture.
• Students with documented disabilities who may need academic accommodations should discuss these needs with me prior to the first two weeks of class. Any student who wishes to request accommodations should contact the Advising Center.
• There will be NO makeup exams for ANY reason.
