Lynne Sharon Schwartz, The Writing on the Wall

Handouts

Course Description: This topics course covers significant thematic developments in American literature and film; this semester our subject will be “trauma and survival.” We will study contemporary films and works of literature that address a variety of traumatic experiences, including incest, rape, and war--and ways of coping. The subject matter is dark and may be painful; our focus will always be literary analysis.

This course is an elective for the English major and minor; it fulfills the core categories of American Studies and Self-Design under the old curriculum and Humanities under the new curriculum. Format: Lecture/Discussion.

Prerequisite: Successful completion of ENG 100: Basic Composition (a grade of "C" or higher)

Note: This class is officially scheduled to end at 3:45 p.m., to allow us adequate time for discussion and for viewing films in their entirety.

Course Objectives (these are in accordance with the educational goals of the Humanities Department):
--At the completion of the course, students will have an overview of developments in American literature and film.
--Students will have knowledge of individual works and their historical and cultural contexts.
--Students will have mastered strategies for reading a novel or watching a film critically.
--Students will have knowledge of basic film and literary terms.
--Students will be able to write effective literary essays.
--Students will gain an appreciation of literature and film.
Course Outcomes:
--Students will demonstrate their knowledge of American literary works and films.
--Students will demonstrate how individual works fit into larger literary, historical, and cultural contexts.
--Students will demonstrate critical thinking and synthesis in oral and written analyses of films and texts.
--Students will demonstrate competence in reading and writing.
--Students will demonstrate knowledge of basic literary and film terms.

Course Requirements:
Your presence and your participation will determine the success of this class.
1) Attendance Policy: Attendance is required. Please note: You are allowed two absences (this includes medical and sports absences, so plan your cuts carefully). There is no need to explain why you are taking the two absences; simply make certain that I have any work that is due on those days. More than two absences will affect your final grade by at least one-third of a letter grade, and five absences will result in a grade of F. Excessive lateness and early departures will count as absences.
2) All class members are expected to participate in discussions.
3) All reading and writing assignments must be completed by the dates specified. Be prepared for occasional quizzes and in-class discovery writing exercises.
4) Three tests. You will be responsible for the following: films viewed in class, content of class lectures and discussions, required reading, and course handouts. The first and third tests will consist of multiple-choice questions and an essay section. The second test will consist of multiple choice and true and false questions.
5) Paper: Analytical or reflective: 4 pages minimum, not including your "Works Cited" page. English majors may want to write at least five pages. You will have a choice of topics. Please note: There will be a penalty for late work. Late submission of the paper will result in the loss of a letter grade for the assignment (thus, a paper that would have merited a “B” will receive a grade of “C”). Even if you are absent, your paper is still due. See below for additional information on exams and writing essay answers.

Extra-credit option: response paper (1-2 pages) on a reading by a guest author (TBA).

Assessment/Grading:
Relationship of assignments and requirements to outcomes:
--Students will demonstrate their knowledge of course content by their completion of tests and an analytical or creative paper and by their meaningful participation in class discussions.
--Students will demonstrate the ability to engage in critical analysis through class discussions and written assignments.
--Students will demonstrate the ability to write clearly and effectively in essay exams and the paper.

Final Grade: Average of grades for tests, paper, and class grade (attendance, scores on quizzes, active and meaningful participation in discussions).

Additional Student Responsibilities:

--Make-Up Policies: If you miss a class, you are still responsible for the material covered. Quizzes will be made-up by the following class. The only excuse honored for missing an exam will be a note signed by medical personnel; you will have a maximum of seven days to make up the midterm and second test, and two days to make up the final exam.

--The Cedar Crest Honor Code and the Classroom Protocol Code, as stated in the Customs book, will be in effect at all times.

--Plagiarism, which is the appropriation of and uncredited use of another's work, in whole or in part, is a serious offense.

A reminder of the statement on plagiarism distributed to all students in WRI 100: It is dishonest to present oral or written work that is not entirely the student’s own. Students must follow the requirements of the instructor regarding when and how much collaboration with other students is permitted. Any language taken from another source, whether individual words or entire paragraphs, must be placed in quotation marks and attributed to the source, following the citation format specified. Paraphrased material from an outside source must also be attributed. In addition, if the student is indebted to another source for a specific perspective or line of argument—regardless of whether the student has directly quoted the source or not—that debt must be acknowledged.

It does not matter if the work is by an established author, a term-paper writer who sold his work to a plagiarism site for $5.00, your best friend, or a blogger whose writing you find appealing.

Plagiarism is theft; it is unethical. It is a waste of your time, integrity, and money and a waste of your classmates’ and my time and energy. An act of intentional plagiarism or cheating will result in a grade of F for the course.

--College Policy Regarding Learning Disabilities: Students with documented disabilities who may need academic accommodations should discuss these needs with their professors during the first two weeks of class. Students with disabilities who wish to request accommodations should contact the Learning Center.

--Cell Phone Etiquette: Because of the emergency notification system, phones should be put on vibrate. They should also be put out of sight. If a cell phone rings during class, please hand it to me to answer. I will explain that you are in class and unavailable. Please refrain from checking your phone/texting during lectures, discussions, and films. Those tiny lights are distracting (and you may miss the most important sentence of the semester).

--Before you leave class on the first day, make sure that you have the phone numbers/e-mail addresses of two of your classmates.

Syllabus

All assignments must be completed by the dates specified. Note: If changes seem to be appropriate, we'll revise the syllabus accordingly. Please bring your books to class and be prepared to participate in discussions.

_Pausing, for a brief breath, on the threshold_
_Sylvia Plath, The Bell Jar_

January 20
Introduction to the Course: What do we mean by “trauma studies”?
Film: _The Prince of Tides_ (1991). Dir. by Barbra Streisand; screenplay by Pat Conroy and Becky Johnston, based on the 1986 Conroy novel of the same title. Streisand plays the role of Susan Lowenstein and Nick Nolte plays Tom Wingo. This is an example of a pop-culture work that incorporates characteristics of trauma narrative.

January 27
For this class, read _The Bell Jar_: Sylvia Plath’s autobiographical novel, published in England in 1963 under the pseudonym Victoria Lucas. Also, review handout (Vickroy).

February 3

February 10
For this class, read _Cat’s Eye_ (1985), Margaret Atwood’s coming-of-age novel about artist Elaine Risley, to p. 244 (end of Part Eight)

February 17
For this class, read _Cat’s Eye_ to end

February 24
Midterm Exam

March 3
Film: _Beloved_ (1998), based on Toni Morrison’s Pulitzer-Prize winning 1987 novel of the same title. Dir. by Jonathan Demme; screenplay by Akusua Busia, Richard LaGraveneses, and Adam Brooks. Oprah Winfrey plays Sethe; Thandie Newton plays the title character.

March 10  No class meeting—Spring Break

March 17
Read The Things They Carried (1990), Tim O’Brien’s autobiographical novel about his experiences in Vietnam.
*Topic for paper due (oral report)

March 24
Test #2 (on content of March 3 and March 17 classes)
Film: The Hurt Locker (2008), dir. by Kathryn Bigelow; screenplay by Mark Boal. The film focuses on an elite Army bomb squad in Iraq.

Criteria for Essay Exam Questions:
An essay answer must consist of a series of clear, well-developed paragraphs, not a single paragraph. The thesis (main point) should be clearly stated in the introductory paragraph, and your essay should build clearly from one topic to the next.
Support your assertions with examples and specific details. You may find it helpful to include brief direct quotations. If you quote from or paraphrase sources (primary texts or secondary commentary), you must acknowledge those sources with parenthetical citations. Sentence structure, grammar, punctuation, and spelling all contribute to clarity. If an essay answer displays serious weaknesses in these areas, 10-15 points will be deducted.

Criteria for Paper:
Minimum length: 4 pages, not including your ‘Works Cited” page. English majors may wish to write at least 5 pages. You are not required to use secondary sources; if you do use them, follow MLA format (7th ed.). If you choose to write an analytical paper, you will of necessity have to include quotations from your primary source(s); again, use MLA format, with parenthetical citations and an entry or entries for the Works (or Work) Cited page.
For this assignment, you may choose to write a personal narrative or reflective essay; remember that allusions to one or more of the works on our syllabus will make your paper richer.
The criteria will be the universal criteria for effective literary papers and essays: a clear and noteworthy thesis/central idea; clear, well-developed content; effective organization; evidence of perceptive and thoughtful reading; correct use of literary terms; a sustained and engaging tone; variety in sentence structure; absence of errors in grammar, punctuation, and spelling; and proper format (treatment of sources, handling of citations, presentation of quotations).
Your paper should be double-spaced. Use one side of the page, one-inch margins, and a font size of 12 (This is a sample of size-12 font).
Writing Rubric:

A  Superior/Outstanding
Work that uses an assignment as the occasion for a piece of writing compelling enough to engage readers on its own terms. It presents an insight or viewpoint with enough fullness and support to command readers' respect, if not their agreement. The treatment of content is fresh, not hackneyed; the organization is coherent and effective; and the language is clear and vivid, not clichéd. Superior work uses sophisticated sentence structure, and needs little or no additional editing in terms of basic details of grammar, punctuation, and format. An “A” literary essay should avoid relying on plot summary and should use literary and film terms correctly; it should also demonstrate the proper handling of secondary sources.

B  Good
Work that meets all of an assignment's expectations with competence. The work may lack the fresh thought or compelling development of “A” work*, but it demonstrates, nevertheless, its author's ability to respond intelligently to an assignment's demands, to structure and focus writing clearly, and to choose words accurately and effectively. *In contrast to “A” work, a “B” paper may--despite its original thought--require a final editing that takes care of weaknesses in basics that detract from the content.

C  Fair
“C” work shows evidence of attempting to meet the assignment's bare specifications, but lacks sharp focus, the full and purposeful development, or the stylistic awareness necessary for a higher grade. “C” work is clearly inadequate in at least one way. Although “C” work may demonstrate competence in one or more facets, one or two pervasive weaknesses will outweigh its strengths. Weaknesses may include failure to engage meaningfully an important aspect of the writing task or to maintain a focus; skimpy or illogical development; repeated significant errors in grammar or idiom.

D  Poor
Work which does not respond acceptably to an assignment, “D” work may misunderstand or disregard the assignment's intent, lack any pattern or organization, or make enough errors in Standard English to make it difficult for a reader to follow the author's thought.

F  Failure
The following will merit a grade of “F”: failure to submit an assignment, incomplete work, work that disregards the assignment's intent, work that displays pervasive weaknesses in both form and content, and, of course, plagiarism.
